CHAMPAGNE
LARMANDIER-BERNIER

Grower Champagne

Champagne Larmandier Bernier

Good champagnes conform to the rules Really great champagnes often break them...

Since the 19th century, the Larmandier family have been cultivating their vines in the premiers and grands crus of the Côte des Blancs. Chalk is the keystone of these great terroirs.. Since 1988, “Pierre Larmandier” dedicates himself to the domain. No more chemicals from 1992, biodynamic and native yeasts since 1999, organic certification in 2003, long elevage on lees in barrels and foudres, are some of Pierre's decisive choices.

CHAMPAGNE
FREDERIC SAVART

Grower Champagne

Champagne Savart

The family estate was founded by Daniel's father, René Savart, who purchased his first vines in 1947. Daniel himself took over the wine making in the 1970s, although production remained extremely small until the mid-1980s, when he significantly expanded the family's vineyard holdings. Fred returned in 1993 at age 23 and in 2001 he left the cooperative, only doing pressing there. Since 2005, Frédéric has been at the helm of the estate.

From the Nature

So, what is “natural wine” anyway?– the term may be trendy, but the methods are actually ancient. As with any natural product, the term 'natural wine' simply indicates that nothing artificial has been added to the grape growing or winemaking processes. Natural wine making aims to express the essence of wine without interference and that is up to personal interpretation.

Humans have intervened with wine to impact every aspect. Everything in natural wine occurs organically, as such the fermented grape juice is produced with traditional practices, naturally occurring yeast, little to no filtration and little to no preservatives. This gives us wines with life, pure juices that can be quite similar or radically different to conventional winemaking.

This type of preparation suits the Tresind Studio ethos exactly, we hope you agree.
